These appointments bring the total number of Worcester Art Museum Corporators to 217.

The appointments were made at the Museum’s 122th annual meeting on November 29, held at Tuckerman Hall. In addition to officers’ reports, the meeting featured presentations illustrating the broad-reaching impact the Museum’s programs and exhibitions have had on the community during the past year. Speakers included Anita Walker, Executive Director of the Mass Cultural Council (MCC), who described the Museum as an accessibility role model around the state, because of inclusive design in the reinstalled Medieval Galleries and at the Salisbury Street entrance. Anh Vu Sawyer, Executive Director of the Southeast Asian Coalition of Central Massachusetts, spoke about the new Southeast Asia Artist-in-Residency program, which brought two artists from Vietnam to Worcester in August. Sawyer said the residency, a collaboration between WAM, the Southeast Asian Coalition of Central Massachusetts, and the IndoChina Arts Partnership, opened the door for dialogue, understanding, creativity, and healing throughout the community. James Dye, a Worcester artist, whose work was exhibited in a solo show at WAM earlier this year, described his transformative experience as the Sally R. Bishop Prize Winner of the 2017 ArtsWorcester Biennial and what it meant to him to have his work hung at the Museum.

In her remarks, Board President Lisa Kirby Gibbs said, “This is such an exciting time for the city of Worcester—with new construction, housing, retail space, and restaurants. This is an equally exciting time for the Worcester Art Museum. We have really hit our stride, with a strong Board of Trustees, a balanced financial profile, exhibitions and programs that reach and connect with broad audiences, and exciting plans for the future. I’m looking forward to working with the Board during the coming year to continue this exciting trajectory.”
